

Abstract

The present invention relates to a process for the production of transgenic plants capable of forming seeds whose embryos exhibit a more refined development.